Dr. Hewetson, of the Belmont County Infirmary, prints an interesting letter on the subject of the real or feigned insanity of Royal Cowles, the Cleveland jeweler, whose disappearance and subsequent detention and recognition in the above infirmary have occasioned a good deal of discussion over the river. The facts connected with Cowles' disappearance and subsequent finding Lave already been published in these columns. Now that he is restored to his family he still seems to have no knowledge of his own identity and this is charged by some to be feigned and not real. It is to relieve Mr. Cowless from these imputations that Dr. Hewet-son's letter, a portion of which we give below, is written.

There are but two views, of his case, he says, which can be entertained: Either he is dishonest or he is honestly what he claims he is—a man with uo knowledge of his own identity—retaining all other parts of the nental operations perfect, all that apper-ained to his own identity a perfect blank. Can the former of these propositions be true? Is the latter false? Let me briefly true' 1s the latter laise? Let the order by the facts as said he now well established in his case, and find, if possible, the truth. The first fact is that before leaving home he wrote a note to his friend R—, stating among other things, with net less." Is the next step that of a sane man bent on concealment of his whereabouts? The note above referred to bears date January 1, 1878. On the next day, January 2, he was found on the street at Bellaire with a small package in his hand containing scissors, a pair of eye-glasses, a bunch of strong twine, needle and thread, claiming that he did not know who he was, where he came from, or where he was going. Going to the nearest hotel, he candidly stated his case. He said that he possessed but little mouey, and if furnished a bed he would give no trouble, and that he believed in a short time this strange mental darkness would pass off. His open, frank countenance, gentlemanly appearance and deportment secured him the sympathy of the landlord, and his request was granted. Within a few days a gentleman came to Bellaire to lecture on temperance, and stopped at the same hotel.

The lecturer, becoming interested in Mr. Cowles' case, invited him to attend the lectures. During the delivery some impulse too powerful for his will possessed his mind, and he rushed out on the most public street of the city, smashing in saloon windows with a club. The roughs ran out of their dens and most shamefully beat and abused him, fracturing an arm near the shoulder joint, and leaving almost the half of his body black and blue. Such conduct proves that in whatever light you view the case they are the actions of an insane man.

The control of the policy and the was landed in jail. His wiolence brought him into the bands of the police, and he was landed in jail. The official soon, however, became aware the policy of the police, and he was landed in jail. The official soon, however, became aware the policy of the policy facts, not one single word or act can I find in which he has sought to divert the efforts of from a true course; not once sought to decive. Certainly this looks like honesty. About the second week of February, 1879, he was brought to our Infirmary, and put under my care as physician to the institution.

Impressed with the strangeness of the case, and feeling the necessity of care and judgment in forming an opinion, I conscientiously sought the truth, carefully looking to the interests of the institution, the patient, and my own reputation. Having thus examined and considered the case, fully aware of all the circumstances, I most unhesitatingly pronounce the case one form of insanity.

The wonderful correctness of all mental operations, apart from those connected with his personal identity, render many unwilling to believe his statement. To those even slightly familiar with the subject this is not very wonderful or unusual. It would not be possible here to set forth the recorded facts showing this to be true. Certain it is, if all cases of mental disease ware indeed by this rule. a large propor-

Look Out for Your Horses When They Financial and Commercial,

Herses found to be perspiring easily, especially if they seem at all disturbed in their breathing, should not be pushed. To hurry a horse in this condition is quite likely to fasten lung difficulty upon him. You will observe this by the quickened breathing, after the horse is put into his stall, especially if the weather is cool, he is very like to have a chill. This is a congestive stage, the blood leaving the sur gestive stage, the blood leaving the surface and concentrating upon the lungs, bronchial tubes or throat, or upon all three at once. This should be guarded against by rubbing the surface dry as as soon as the horse comes off his drive; on no account allowing him to stand for one moment in a draught of cold air. Rub him dry and blanket him well, observing carefully whether or not he stands with his back humped up, and whether he eats his rations or not. If he stands in the position named and leaves his feed untouched, then you have reason to anticipate trouble. Reaction will come off, and you are liable to have a case of acute inlammation of the throat, bronchia or lungs, and to determine which, being able at the same time to isstitute a safe plan of treatment, a competent veterinary surgeon treatment, a competent veterinary surgeon should be called.

The demands of the future upon our agricultural resources will be far greater than they have been in the past, and new methods and new systems must be devised and employed to meet them. The yield of the land now under cultivation must be increased, and new fields prepared for new wants. To compete with other nations who, like ourselves, have learned how great the dependence is upon the soil, our farmers must employ greater skill and ex-ercise greater care in their work. The re-quirements upon them will continue to

Then, too, the drudgery of the farm should be lessened, and the farmer relieved from many of his hardships, his toil lightened, and his comforts increased through the promulgating of new ideas and the employment of improved laborsaving machinery. All classes are interested in the accomplishment of these ends, and it is, therefore, the duty and; interest of all to promote the growth of agriculture and the comfort of its followers.—Vermant Farmer.
